Venus was indignant that the nymph was allowed to be so bold, so she came and wrenched out Aeneas' spear from deep in the root. Then these glorious warriors, their weapons and their spirits restored to them, one relying on his sword, the other towering and formidable behind his spear, stood there breathing hard, ready to engage in the contest of war. 5

Meanwhile the King of All-powerful Olympus saw Juno watching the battle from a golden cloud and spoke these words to her: 'O my dear wife, what will be the end of this? What is there left for you to do? You yourself know, and admit that you know, that Aeneas is a god of this land, that he has a right to heaven and is fated to be raised to the stars.' 10
