Text A

An extract taken from a description of a hospital for disabled and retired soldiers, published in 1695. This section gives an account of how food is prepared and served in the hospital.

The Cooks take the Meat out of the Pots and Boylers about Eight a Clock in the Morning, to drefs and divide it into Portions; about Ten a Clock the Meffes ${ }^{1}$ are prepared, and ready to be ferved in at Eleven a Clock: And that they may be the more exact in making thofe Portions equal and of weight, fo as every one may have what is his due, they weigh firft about half a dozen of Portions that are placed before the Cooks to Serve them as Patterns and Models, by which they are to judge how the reft of the Portions of the like weight are to be made, or as near to them as poffible. About half an hour after Ten a Clock, the Pottage ${ }^{2}$ being made ready by the Cooks in the Boylers, the fame is carried in large Portable Kettles by the Servants of the Refectories ${ }^{3}$, who come into the Kitchen and carry it away into the Refectories, and fill all the Porringers ${ }^{4}$ that they find already ranged in order on the Tables, and which the Soldiers take care to garnifh with Bread cut into them: Thefe Soupes are $\int 0$ very good, that they who have the Curiofity to See the fame prepared, are furprifed at it, becaufe of the great quantity that is ufed; but it muft alfo be confidered what care is taken to have it $\int 0$. For in all other Houfes the Cooks have a prevailing Cuftom to take all the Fat and Dripping of the boyl'd and roaft Meat for themfelves, as being a Profit and Perquijite ${ }^{5}$ of their Place, as they reckon it; but here it is otherwife; wherefore that the Pottage Jhould be $\int 0$ much the better, it is ordered by the Adminiftrator-General, that the Cook's Wages Jhould be raifed.
