MARK SCHEME

Maximum Mark: 60

Published

This mark scheme is published as an aid to teachers and candidates, to indicate the requirements of the examination. It shows the basis on which Examiners were instructed to award marks. It does not indicate the details of the discussions that took place at an Examiners' meeting before marking began, which would have considered the acceptability of alternative answers.

Mark schemes should be read in conjunction with the question paper and the Principal Examiner Report for Teachers.

Cambridge International will not enter into discussions about these mark schemes.

Cambridge International is publishing the mark schemes for the May/June 2024 series for most Cambridge IGCSE, Cambridge International A and AS Level and Cambridge Pre-U components, and some Cambridge O Level components.

This document consists of 17 printed pages.

Generic Marking Principles

These general marking principles must be applied by all examiners when marking candidate answers. They should be applied alongside the specific content of the mark scheme or generic level descriptions for a question. Each question paper and mark scheme will also comply with these marking principles.

GENERIC MARKING PRINCIPLE 1:

Marks must be awarded in line with:

- the specific content of the mark scheme or the generic level descriptors for the question
- the specific skills defined in the mark scheme or in the generic level descriptors for the question
- the standard of response required by a candidate as exemplified by the standardisation scripts.

GENERIC MARKING PRINCIPLE 2:

Marks awarded are always whole marks (not half marks, or other fractions).

GENERIC MARKING PRINCIPLE 3:

Marks must be awarded positively:

- marks are awarded for correct/valid answers, as defined in the mark scheme. However, credit is given for valid answers which go beyond the scope of the syllabus and mark scheme, referring to your Team Leader as appropriate
- marks are awarded when candidates clearly demonstrate what they know and can do
- marks are not deducted for errors
- marks are not deducted for omissions
- answers should only be judged on the quality of spelling, punctuation and grammar when these features are specifically assessed by the question as indicated by the mark scheme. The meaning, however, should be unambiguous.

GENERIC MARKING PRINCIPLE 4:

Rules must be applied consistently, e.g. in situations where candidates have not followed instructions or in the application of generic level descriptors.

GENERIC MARKING PRINCIPLE 5:

Marks should be awarded using the full range of marks defined in the mark scheme for the question (however; the use of the full mark range may be limited according to the quality of the candidate responses seen).

GENERIC MARKING PRINCIPLE 6:

Marks awarded are based solely on the requirements as defined in the mark scheme. Marks should not be awarded with grade thresholds or grade descriptors in mind.

Social Science-Specific Marking Principles (for point-based marking)*1 Components using point-based marking:

- Point marking is often used to reward knowledge, understanding and application of skills. We give credit where the candidate's answer shows relevant knowledge, understanding and application of skills in answering the question. We do not give credit where the answer shows confusion.

From this it follows that we:

- a DO credit answers which are worded differently from the mark scheme if they clearly convey the same meaning (unless the mark scheme requires a specific term)
- b DO credit alternative answers/examples which are not written in the mark scheme if they are correct
- c DO credit answers where candidates give more than one correct answer in one prompt/numbered/scaffolded space where extended writing is required rather than list-type answers. For example, questions that require n reasons (e.g. State two reasons ...).
- d DO NOT credit answers simply for using a 'key term' unless that is all that is required. (Check for evidence it is understood and not used wrongly.)
- e DO NOT credit answers which are obviously self-contradicting or trying to cover all possibilities
- f DO NOT give further credit for what is effectively repetition of a correct point already credited unless the language itself is being tested. This applies equally to 'mirror statements' (i.e. polluted/not polluted).
- g DO NOT require spellings to be correct, unless this is part of the test. However spellings of syllabus terms must allow for clear and unambiguous separation from other syllabus terms with which they may be confused (e.g. Corrasion/Corrosion)

2 Presentation of mark scheme:

- Slashes (/) or the word 'or' separate alternative ways of making the same point.
- Semi colons (;) bullet points (•) or figures in brackets (1) separate different points.
- Content in the answer column in brackets is for examiner information/context to clarify the marking but is not required to earn the mark (except Accounting syllabuses where they indicate negative numbers).

3 Calculation questions:

- The mark scheme will show the steps in the most likely correct method(s), the mark for each step, the correct answer(s) and the mark for each answer
- If working/explanation is considered essential for full credit, this will be indicated in the question paper and in the mark scheme. In all other instances, the correct answer to a calculation should be given full credit, even if no supporting working is shown.
- Where the candidate uses a valid method which is not covered by the mark scheme, award equivalent marks for reaching equivalent stages.
- Where an answer makes use of a candidate's own incorrect figure from previous working, the 'own figure rule' applies: full marks will be given if a correct and complete method is used. Further guidance will be included in the mark scheme where necessary and any exceptions to this general principle will be noted.

4 Annotation:

- For point marking, ticks can be used to indicate correct answers and crosses can be used to indicate wrong answers. There is no direct relationship between ticks and marks. Ticks have no defined meaning for levels of response marking.
- For levels of response marking, the level awarded should be annotated on the script.
- Other annotations will be used by examiners as agreed during standardisation, and the meaning will be understood by all examiners who marked that paper.

Guidance on using levels-based mark schemes

Marking of work should be positive, rewarding achievement where possible, but clearly differentiating across the whole range of marks, where appropriate.

The marker should look at the work and then make a judgement about which level statement is the best fit. In practice, work does not always match one level statement precisely so a judgement may need to be made between two or more level statements.

Once a best-fit level statement has been identified, use the following guidance to decide on a specific mark:

- If the candidate's work convincingly meets the level statement, award the highest mark.
- If the candidate's work adequately meets the level statement, award the most appropriate mark in the middle of the range (where middle marks are available).
- If the candidate's work just meets the level statement, award the lowest mark.

2(b)	Evaluate the law of handling stolen goods. Use Table B to mark candidate responses to this question. AO1 out of 10 marks. AO2 out of 6 marks. AO3 out of 9 marks. Indicative content Responses may include: AO1 Knowledge and understanding <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The offence is found in s22 Theft Act 1968. • The goods must already be stolen at the time of the handling so if a person handling goods believes them to be stolen but in fact they are not they could be guilty of attempted handling - Haughton v Smith (1975). • The offence includes goods stolen outside the UK if stealing was an offence where it took place as well as goods obtained by blackmail or by fraud under the Fraud Act 2006. • Money or other goods received by the thief or handler from the sale of stolen goods are also stolen. • Handling can mean receiving stolen goods – taking possession or control of the stolen property. • Handling can mean arranging to receive – the arrangements are no more than merely preparatory but for goods which are in fact stolen • Handling can mean undertaking or arranging to undertake in their retention, removal or realisation by another person or for the benefit of another person - R v Bloxham (1983). • Handling can be achieved by retention of the goods (keeping possession of them, continuing to have them and not losing possession of them as in R v Pitchley (1972) and R v Kanwar (1982)); removal of the goods (carrying or transporting stolen goods; disposal of the goods (including transforming destroying or throwing or giving away stolen goods)); realisation of the goods (selling or exchanging them for something else of value). • The defendant must either know or believe the goods are stolen at the time they carry out the actus reus; this test is subjective - R v Moys (1984). • They must also be dishonest – this has the same meaning as for theft. • This is a triable either way offence with a maximum penalty of 14 years. 	25

Question	Answer	Marks
2(b)	AO2 Analysis and application Analysis: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The range of possible elements in this offence reflects the need to cover lots of different types of actus reus. • There is also a link to other Theft Act 1968 offences, especially in the meaning of ‘stolen’ and the requirement for dishonesty. • The maximum penalty suggests the seriousness of the offence and the need to extend liability beyond just the original thief. • The range of elements allows for fair labelling across a range of activities which helps with sentencing practicalities. • The development of the law through the cases shows complexity as the statutory definition has been unpicked. • As a triable either way offence this can lead to juries having to be sure of a lot of different elements to be able to convict. AO3 Evaluation <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Handling of stolen goods is closely linked to other dishonesty-based offences but because it can be committed in such a variety of ways it can be seen as something of a catch-all offence; this can make it very effective in extending liability. • As the offence is usually committed by someone receiving stolen goods to use or to sell them it could be said to be effective as there will be less thieves if the offence works well. • To be guilty of the offence of handling stolen goods, the defendant must either know the goods are stolen or believe them to be stolen at the time of handling and they will be taken to know this if the thief tells them that which can make the law effective. • However, if the defendant doesn’t know for certain that the goods were stolen, but there was no other reasonable conclusion in the circumstances, the jury might assume they knew; this can make the law less effective if juries don’t convict for lack of certainty or do convict when the evidence is unclear. • Evidence that a defendant has been involved in or convicted of handling stolen goods can be used to prove whether they knew or believed the goods to be stolen; this is not normally admissible under the law of evidence so it can be unfair to the accused and make the law ineffective. • Cases tried in Crown Court can be very complex for juries which can impact on their decision making and the effectiveness of the law. Accept all valid responses.

3(b)	Evaluate the fairness of the law on omissions in actus reus. Use Table B to mark candidate responses to this question. AO1 out of 10 marks. AO2 out of 6 marks. AO3 out of 9 marks. Indicative content Responses may include: AO1 Knowledge and understanding <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • An actus reus is normally a voluntary and positive act. • In some situations, a failure to act can give rise to criminal liability. • Statutory duty – a duty imposed by an Act of Parliament, often to raise standards of behaviour; for example: failing to provide a specimen of breath under s6 Road Traffic Act 1988. • Contractual duty – this often arises due to employment – R v Pittwood (1902). • Duty due to a relationship – this is widely defined but can be between a parent and child or between other family members - R v Gibbins and Proctor (1918), R v Evans (2009). • Duty undertaken voluntarily – this is widely defined but may involve taking on caring for someone vulnerable – R v Stone and Dobinson (1977). • Duty arising from public office – this applies to a small category of people, such as police officers - R v Dytham (1979). • Duty arising due to a dangerous situation - the defendant fails to prevent harm as they allow a situation to become dangerous - R v Miller (1983), R v Evans (2009). AO2 Analysis and application Analysis: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • An actus reus is a key element; without it there is no need to prove mens rea and there cannot be a criminal offence. • This means it is essential to prove as it is something which can be seen and so helps with sentencing. • The development of the law shows complexity as originally an actus reus had be both positive and voluntary but this left gaps in the law. • This led to unfairness as those who did not do what they should have done avoided liability. • There can be inconsistency in duties as they do not always take account of whether the person involved is able to discharge it so there is an issue of fair labelling. • Some duties do not take account of the complex relationships those involved have or the pressures individuals can be under. 	25

3(b)	AO3 Evaluation <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The range of duties has been expanded over time to cover gaps in the law, which can make the law fairer. • Most developments have been made by judges suggesting that change is incremental and in step with society's needs. • Statutory duties show Parliament acting as an agent of social paternalism and making people behave better – this might be in relation to large groups such as drivers, smaller groups such as family members who may be aware of someone else in the family abusing a vulnerable person or particular categories of people such as teachers having inappropriate relationships with students which can help with fairness. • Contractual duties make sure that those with responsibility to others discharge them properly which makes the law fair. • Duties due to relationships often deal with situations in families – this can be good and can overlap with statutory duties, as between a parent and child. However, it can be hard to define the extent of a relationship; there is a problem if the person to whom the duty is owed does not want it to be fulfilled. • A duty undertaken voluntarily can be good as it enables people to be cared for. However, the duty assumed may be impossible to carry out, the person who assumes it may not have realised its full implications and they may not be able to fulfil it due to their own shortcomings. • A duty arising from public office is good as those who are being paid to protect society should do so. However, there is a problem in how much they are then expected to do. • A duty arising out of a dangerous situation is good as it encourages people to behave better. However, they may not be able to see the dangerousness of the situation which raises questions of fairness. • There is also a problem as there is no Good Samaritan law so there is no obligation to rescue unless there is a duty; critics argue this is morally and legally wrong and raises questions of fairness. Accept all valid responses.
