The Nation Brand Office, a government organisation, has been created to carry out market analysis and to oversee issues related to the brand identity.

The Nebraska Tourism Commission (NTC) took an unusual approach to stand out as a destination in a competitive market. Most destination marketing organisations (DMOs) emphasise the positive features of the destination. Instead, NTC acknowledged all of the negative perceptions of the state and used them humorously to advertise the destination. Statements that appear to be negative such as 'Famous for our flat, boring landscape' and 'Nothing to see or do here' are used as the focus of the new marketing campaign for NTC. The images used in the advertisements show this is clearly not the case, as seen above.

NTC admits that Nebraska may not be on everyone's list of places to visit but they have set out to create a brand that is rooted in the core value of honesty, shared by Nebraskans and potential visitors to the state.

The campaign was well received with most respondents to an international survey saying that the humour of the campaign worked well for them and they would be more likely to visit. The results of the survey also showed that NTC knew its target market well and that the campaign successfully raised brand awareness.
