Chosen Cookies (CC)

Sam started CC 5 years ago in country P. He set up as a sole trader because he wanted to keep the business small. CC makes different types of cookies and sells them in its own shop in the city centre.

Sam's cookies are high-quality and often purchased by customers for special occasions such as birthdays or weddings. Sam is reviewing the pricing method he uses as he wants to sell more cookies. Sam also knows packaging used for the cookies is important.

CC's cookies are produced by batch production using specialised baking equipment. The ingredients are purchased regularly so they are fresh. CC has 10 employees producing the cookies and 5 employees in its shop. Sam wants to recruit an Operations Manager to oversee the production of the cookies to give him more time to be with his family.

Sam is developing new cookies. He has two options to choose between. These are outlined in Appendix 3. He plans to start selling these new cookies to other retail shops in country P. These retail shops already sell a variety of cookies from different manufacturers.

There are many reasons why a business might need finance. Sam is reviewing CC's finances and is considering taking out a bank loan.
