3 Traduisez en français:

One day last year, I was walking on a narrow footpath along the river when I heard noises ahead of me. There were three teenagers from my school and one of them, a boy of about fifteen, was shouting with fear. Their dog had slipped and had fallen into the river.

They did not know what to do and there was no-one else to help them. The animal was trying to get out of the river, but it was very small and the water seemed very deep. Everyone was starting to panic.

I told the teenagers to stay calm and to go and look for a piece of wood. I did the same thing and fortunately I managed to find a large branch under a tree. We placed it in the water near the dog who climbed onto the bank.

The teenagers said that they lived nearby and I thought that I should accompany them to their house and explain to their parents what had happened. They thanked me and offered me some tea.

I see the teenagers sometimes when I go out at the weekend. If the weather is fine, they still like to go for walks in the countryside. They smile at me when they notice me. Their dog still loves running everywhere and playing with a ball.
