Part 3: Translation

Translate the following passage into Urdu.

Fifty years or so ago, it was very unusual to see Asian people outside the big British cities. Nowadays, of course, it is only strange in very small towns and villages. The reason for this is that nearly every town in the country has at least one Indian restaurant. In fact most of these restaurants are run by Bangladeshis, and many of the dishes are not normally found in the subcontinent! The most popular dish in Britain is 'Chicken Tikka Masala' which, I am told, was invented in London. The latest trend is Balti which first became popular in Pakistani restaurants in Birmingham. Last month, a TV programme looked into the origins of the word 'balti'. Most Pakistanis thought that it came from the Urdu word for bucket, but one Sikh cooking pot manufacturer said it was from the Punjabi word 'baati' which is a metal cooking pot. In my opinion, it is most probably from Baltistan in the Northern Areas of Pakistan and the cooking style was adopted by the Mughals in the seventeenth century.
