MARK SCHEME

Maximum Mark: 60

---

Published

This mark scheme is published as an aid to teachers and candidates, to indicate the requirements of the examination. It shows the basis on which Examiners were instructed to award marks. It does not indicate the details of the discussions that took place at an Examiners' meeting before marking began, which would have considered the acceptability of alternative answers.

Mark schemes should be read in conjunction with the question paper and the Principal Examiner Report for Teachers.

Cambridge International will not enter into discussions about these mark schemes.

Cambridge International is publishing the mark schemes for the October/November 2024 series for most Cambridge IGCSE, Cambridge International A and AS Level components, and some Cambridge O Level components.

This document consists of 76 printed pages.

Generic Marking Principles

These general marking principles must be applied by all examiners when marking candidate answers. They should be applied alongside the specific content of the mark scheme or generic level descriptions for a question. Each question paper and mark scheme will also comply with these marking principles.

GENERIC MARKING PRINCIPLE 1:

Marks must be awarded in line with:

- the specific content of the mark scheme or the generic level descriptors for the question
- the specific skills defined in the mark scheme or in the generic level descriptors for the question
- the standard of response required by a candidate as exemplified by the standardisation scripts.

GENERIC MARKING PRINCIPLE 2:

Marks awarded are always whole marks (not half marks, or other fractions).

GENERIC MARKING PRINCIPLE 3:

Marks must be awarded positively:

- marks are awarded for correct/valid answers, as defined in the mark scheme. However, credit is given for valid answers which go beyond the scope of the syllabus and mark scheme, referring to your Team Leader as appropriate
- marks are awarded when candidates clearly demonstrate what they know and can do
- marks are not deducted for errors
- marks are not deducted for omissions
- answers should only be judged on the quality of spelling, punctuation and grammar when these features are specifically assessed by the question as indicated by the mark scheme. The meaning, however, should be unambiguous.

GENERIC MARKING PRINCIPLE 4:

Rules must be applied consistently, e.g. in situations where candidates have not followed instructions or in the application of generic level descriptors.

GENERIC MARKING PRINCIPLE 5:

Marks should be awarded using the full range of marks defined in the mark scheme for the question. (However; the use of the full mark range may be limited according to the quality of the candidate responses seen.)

GENERIC MARKING PRINCIPLE 6:

Marks awarded are based solely on the requirements as defined in the mark scheme. Marks should not be awarded with grade thresholds or grade descriptors in mind.

Assessment objectives*AO1

An ability to recall, select, organise and deploy knowledge of the syllabus content.

AO2

An ability to construct historical explanations using an understanding of:

- cause and consequence, change and continuity, similarity and difference
- the motives, emotions, intentions and beliefs of people in the past.

Table A: Use this table to give marks for each candidate response for AO1 and AO2 for part (b) of each question.

1(c)	How important was Garibaldi’s Sicilian campaign to Italian unification? Explain your answer. Level 5: Explains both sides and supports a valid judgement on ‘how far’. 10 marks One explanation or more on each side. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Garibaldi’s Sicilian campaign was important to Italian unification because it brought the South of Italy under control and allowed the process to be completed. However, much work had already been done by Cavour to unite the north of Italy and remove Austrian influence. Cavour laid the groundwork for unification and Garibaldi helped to finish off the process. Without Cavour’s work this would not have been possible.</li> </ul> Level 4: Explains both sides. 7–9 marks For candidates to be awarded this level they must have one explanation on each side. Seven marks for one explanation on each side; one additional mark for each additional explanation on either side. Level 3: Explains one side. 4–6 marks One Level 3 mark for each explanation. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Garibaldi’s Sicilian campaign was important for the unification of Italy because he defeated the Bourbon forces in Palermo and from there captured the whole of Sicily. Having Sicily under Italian control allowed him to launch an attack on the mainland. He launched an attack on Naples. While fighting there, Piedmont’s army joined him and Naples was defeated. This unified Italy under the control of Victor Emmanuel II.</li> </ul> OR <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Other factors were also important. For example, Cavour’s diplomatic moves led to France fighting alongside Piedmont against Austria in 1859. Cavour involved Piedmont in the Crimean War so that he was involved in the peace talks in 1856. This allowed him to develop close relations with Napoleon III of France. The result was that in 1858 Napoleon invited him to Plombières where they agreed to provoke Austria into war. This war led to Piedmont winning control of Lombardy, Tuscany, Parma, Modena and much of the Papal States. This was a major step towards a united Italy under Piedmont and had been achieved by Cavour’s diplomacy.</li> </ul>	10

2(c)	How important was the Treaty of Olmütz? Explain your answer. Level 5: Explains both sides and supports a valid judgement on ‘how far’. 10 marks One explanation or more on each side. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>In the long term the Treaty of Olmütz was not so important. In the short term, it was a humiliation for Prussia and showed how the revolution of 1848–49 had failed. However, in the longer term it gave Prussia time to grow stronger. Austria did not gain everything they wanted through the treaty and faced serious financial problems. Meanwhile Prussia experienced economic growth in the 1850s and increased its influence within Germany. By 1856, it was clear to Bismarck, who had supported the Treaty of Olmütz, that Prussia would have to fight Austria for dominance of Germany. Army reforms and modernisation meant that Prussia was able to quickly defeat Austria when the time came in 1866.</li> </ul> Level 4: Explains both sides. 7–9 marks For candidates to be awarded this level they must have one explanation on each side. Seven marks for one explanation on each side; one additional mark for each additional explanation on either side. Level 3: Explains one side. 4–6 marks One Level 3 mark for each explanation. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>The Treaty of Olmütz was important as it was a humiliation for Prussia. Having to accept the treaty showed that the Frankfurt Parliament had failed and that Prussia had failed to establish itself as the leading state. The League of Princes had been set up as a Prussian-dominated union. However, when the ruler of Hesse-Cassel was overthrown, he turned to Austria, not Prussia, for help in suppressing the revolution. Austria sent an army of 200 000, demonstrating clearly to other German states that Austria, not Prussia, was still the dominant force in Germany.</li> </ul> OR <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>The Treaty of Olmütz was not so important. Although Prussia had to abandon its plan for a Prussian Union, the reassertion of Austrian power did not go as far as Austria had hoped. Austria wanted to dominate all the German states and the Habsburg Empire but this was not acceptable to the smaller German states. The German Confederation of 1815 was re-established in 1851. Although this suggested that there would be close cooperation between Austria and Prussia, there was tension between the two. In any case, Austria faced financial and economic problems, so while Prussia grew stronger in the 1850s, Austria weakened.</li> </ul>	10

Naval rivalry between Germany and Britain was much more important as it caused a public outcry and the British started to see Germany as a real threat. Britain had a strong naval tradition and was viewed as ‘ruling the waves’. Germany had a strong army and did not challenge British sea power. This changed when the German High Seas Fleet was established. The British response was to build Dreadnoughts and there was a huge public outcry to increase spending on these ships. This was more important than colonial rivalry, and the naval arms race which followed suggested that both sides were preparing for war.</li> </ul> Level 4: Explains both sides. 7–9 marks For candidates to be awarded this level they must have one explanation on each side. Seven marks for one explanation on each side; one additional mark for each additional explanation on either side. Level 3: Explains one side. 4–6 marks One Level 3 mark for each explanation. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>The British were afraid that Germany wanted an empire and would use its strength to acquire colonies. The Plan relied on speed but resistance meant the German army did not move quickly enough to defeat France. Therefore, Germany was forced to fight a two-front war which they hoped to avoid. Russia mobilised more quickly than expected which made things worse, but the Russian army was so badly prepared they lost heavily in their first battles. Explain your answer. Level 5: Explains both sides and supports a valid judgement on ‘how far’. 10 marks One explanation or more on each side. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>The French Resistance movement became important around the time of the D-Day landings as before that time it had been disjointed and uncoordinated, with little power to act effectively against German forces. Working with Allied teams in the build-up to D-Day, it gave the movement a focus and direction which had been lacking in the early years of Nazi occupation. The Resistance played an important role in disrupting rail links and power networks in the areas which were to be invaded. This meant communications were more difficult for German forces and prevented them from focusing their strength on Normandy at the time of the Allied invasion.</li> </ul> Level 4: Explains both sides. 7–9 marks For candidates to be awarded this level they must have one explanation on each side. Seven marks for one explanation on each side; one additional mark for each additional explanation on either side. Level 3: Explains one side. 4–6 marks One Level 3 mark for each explanation. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>The French Resistance was important because it provided information and support to the Allies both during the Nazi occupation and after the D-Day landings. For example, it provided an escape network for Allied soldiers and airmen who had become trapped behind enemy lines. Intelligence information was also given to the Allies about German troop movements and this allowed them to plan their operations in France to better effect. ‘Jedburgh’ teams made up of British, French and American personnel were parachuted into France before D-Day to ensure that French resistance activities were coordinated with Allied strategy.</li> </ul> OR <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>The French Resistance had little impact on the war and only really became useful to the war effort after the Allies had landed in Normandy in 1944. The proportion of the French population involved in the Resistance is estimated at between one and three percent and there were many different groups which were not coordinated. In the early years of the war they were no match for German forces and any saboteurs who were caught were executed. This meant they were unable to undermine Nazi control of France from within.</li> </ul>	10
